Acqua Nottò e Corpo nel Cinema Cinese

Torni Di Lucce

Diana Polacchi

Based on Western psychodynamic description, this paper will focus on Chinese classical philosophy towards interpersonal interaction. Questions raised in the paper include: How can we understand one of the fundamental concepts shared between East and West, which is the concept of "to be there," according to Chinese culture? This paper examines how the concept is understood from different perspectives, and how to incorporate this concept into the processes of learning and teaching in a way that is meaningful to both the student and the teacher. This study provides insights into the relationship between Eastern and Western thought and its relevance in modern education.

In the context of the ongoing debate about the role of Chinese culture in contemporary society, it is necessary to acknowledge the importance of preserving and promoting Chinese culture. The Chinese culture is not only a significant part of the world's cultural heritage but also a valuable resource for today's society. It is essential to recognize the contributions of Chinese culture in shaping the world, and to promote its values and traditions in a global context.

In recent years, Chinese culture has experienced a significant revival, with a growing interest in traditional arts, literature, and philosophy. This revival has been driven by a desire to reconnect with China's rich cultural heritage and to promote its unique values and traditions. The Chinese economy's rapid growth has also contributed to the increased interest in Chinese culture, as it has become a symbol of Chinese identity and national pride.

However, the promotion of Chinese culture should not be limited to traditional forms alone. Modern Chinese culture is also an important aspect of the country's identity and should be recognized and promoted as well. This includes contemporary literature, music, and film, which are increasingly gaining recognition on the global stage.

In conclusion, the promotion of Chinese culture is not only important for preserving the country's rich heritage but also for enhancing understanding and appreciation of its unique values and traditions. It is crucial to continue to promote Chinese culture in a way that is meaningful and relevant to today's society, while also respecting and preserving its traditional roots.
